Mission Statement

Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim is a Sephardic post-high school yeshivah located in Jerusalem, dedicated to preparing young men for college, business and life with a strong foundation in Torah and misvot. Rooted in the rich traditions of Aram Soba and guided by the timeless Sephardic values of our ancestors, we strive to cultivate future leaders- Bnei Torah- who will carry their experience of living and learning in Eres Yisrael into every aspect of their lives.

RABBI EDWARD BENJAMIN

DIRECTOR OF RECRUITMENT & NIGHT SEDER

Rabbi Edward Benjamin, who has been involved with Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim since its inception, graduated from Hillel Yeshiva High School and attended Yeshivat Torah Shraga for a year. He then attended and graduated CUNY with a BA degree in Philosophy and Jewish Studies while attending the Sephardic Rabbinical College as a part time student. While working in Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim, Rabbi Benjamin is also pursuing semikha from the Chief Rabbinate in Israel and has, to date, passed the rabbinic exams on abelut, nidda, and huppa vkiddushin. He also holds a master's degree in Jewish Education from Yeshiva University's Azrieli School of Jewish Education.

All of Rabbi Benjamin's Shiurim this year have been graciously sponsored by

JOSH ABOODY

ELECTIVES

Mr. Josh Aboody was born and raised in Cleveland, Ohio, before spending two years in Israel- post high school. Upon his return to America, he went to Yeshivat Ner Yisrael in Baltimore followed by law school at the University of Maryland. An attorney, working for an investment bank in New York, Mr. Aboody and his family made aliyah in 2017 and he has taught Gemara and Jewish Thought in Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim since 2018.

DR. CHARLES COHEN

NIGHT SEDER

Dr. Charles Cohen grew up in Brooklyn, New York, where he attended Magen David Yeshivah High School. Afterward, he spent a year studying at Yeshivah Torat Shraga before continuing his learning for five years in the Sephardic Rabbinical College half-day program under the guidance of Rabbi Shimon Alouf and Rabbi Harold Sutton. He went on to earn a bachelor's degree in psychology from Brooklyn College and later received his Doctor of Optometry (O.D.) from the SUNY College of Optometry. He started his practice in 2021 and four years later made aliyah in the summer of 2025, with his wife and three children.

Spiritual Growth by Rabbi Harold Sutton

Dear Students,

As you approach the end of your year of learning in ארץ ישראל, it is truly a time to reflect back on your tremendous accomplishments as well as to look forward to your future and to take what you have learned and infuse it into your daily lives.

The end of our year coincides with the time period of Pesah through Shabuot. Both reflect an interesting relationship with חמץ. Throughout the year, חמץ (which according to our Rabbis, represents the physical need in our lives) is permitted for daily consumption but prohibited to be brought on the מזבח, representing a separation between our physical lives accommodating our physical needs and our spiritual lives which seem to mandate an abstention from the physical world of חמץ. This can create a confusing duality. Yet during Pessah we abstain from חמץ even in our daily lives. This abstention from חמץ is only temporary. Seven weeks later, on Shabuot, we are permitted to bring חמץ on the altar for the שתי הלחם offerings, elevating our physicality into the spiritual, representing the ultimate goal of the Jewish experience. This can only be accomplished by first learning to live without our dependence on חמץ, as only then can we elevate it into the world of the מזבח.

My dear students – you have elected to spend a year in Israel, focused on learning and spiritual growth. This included secluding yourself in ארץ ישראל, the spiritual center of the world, and leaving your normal physical pursuits in חוץ לארץ. You have grown tremendously. Now your challenge as you return to your daily lives is to transport your spiritual learning into your physical lives, back in your old surroundings, thereby elevating your familiar physical environment with your recent spiritual growth.

We at Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim are extremely proud of your growth. We also look forward to continue to build and develop our relationship and to be part of your future. What makes Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim unique is that we are not just a Yeshivah for a year – but partners for life.

Rabbi Harold Sutton, born and raised in Brooklyn, received Semikha from Hakham Ovadia Yosef, Hakham Meir Mazuz and Hakham Shimon Alouf. He earned a degree in Psychology from YU and studied towards a Master's degree in Judaic studies at NYU. He served as the Rabbi of Bnei Yitzhak, Rosh Yeshivah of Sephardic Rabbinical College and Rosh Yeshivah of Magen David Yeshivah before making Aliyah and founding Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim where he currently serves as Rosh Yeshivah.

Looking Back & Looking Forward by Rabbi Yehoshua Shani

The school year at the yeshivah is coming to an end. Another year of Torah, of growth, of friendship, and of personal and spiritual development in Jerusalem.

But the truth is, this was not just another year.

This was a year in which the students of the yeshivah studied Torah in a country at war. A year in which news from the front lines became an inseparable part of daily life. A year in which soldiers went out to battle, families lived with constant worry, and an entire nation underwent profound upheaval. And amid all this, the students continued to grow.

Perhaps that was the point that moved me most deeply this year: to see young men who could easily have been swept into fear, confusion, or indifference, yet instead chose to deepen their learning, strengthen their faith, refine their characters, take responsibility, and connect even more deeply to the Jewish people and the Land of Israel.

It was specifically through this complex period that the true strength of this generation was revealed.

We saw students who prayed differently. Learned differently. Listened differently.

They asked deeper questions about their mission, their responsibility, and the meaning of their lives.

War reveals a person to himself. And this year, we were privileged to witness many students in the yeshiva become more mature, more serious, and more committed to the values by which they live.

This year, the bet midrash was not disconnected from reality - it was a response to reality.

In days when the people of Israel were fighting for their very existence, Torah took on a more tangible meaning. Not as theory, but as a life force. As a source of faith, stability, identity, and hope.

Rabbi Yehoshua Shani, a resident of Kiryat Arba, studied at Yeshivat HaKotel and graduated from the Lifshitz Teachers' College. He previously served as principal of the Orot Etzion School in Efrat, and later as principal of the Reishit Chochma School in Moscow. He also served as Rosh Yeshiva of Barkai Yeshivah in New York. Since its inception, he has been the Israel Executive Director of Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim.

And within all this storm and upheaval, we were also privileged to witness great Heavenly kindnesses. Jerusalem itself was a great teacher this year.

To study Torah in a city where prophets, kings, and Jewish warriors walked for thousands of years - especially during such a historic period - is an immense privilege. There is something in the air of Jerusalem that elevates people. It demands of them to think bigger, deeper, and more truthfully.

I believe that the students of this year will carry this experience with them for the rest of their lives. Not only the lessons and the Talmudic discussions, but the feeling of what it means to be a Jew in a generation facing great challenges. What it means to live a life of responsibility and not merely comfort. And what it means to be part of the story of the Jewish people.

For me personally, this year was also a year of continuing forward along a path. My beloved son, Ori Mordechai Shani hy"d, believed with all his heart in goodness, devotion, and love for the Jewish people. The phrase he often said - "הטוב ינצח" Goodness will prevail" - took on an even deeper meaning this year. When I see students choosing to add light, faith, Torah, and responsibility davka in the midst of war, I feel that this light continues to shine. This is the true victory of the people of Israel. Not only to fight - but to continue building. Not only to survive - but to grow.

I want to thank the yeshivah staff wholeheartedly - the rabbis and all the staff members - for their extraordinary dedication throughout the year. And a special thank you to the parents, for your trust and partnership.

And to our dear students: know that this year shaped you far beyond what you currently understand. Many years from now, you will remember not only what you learned this year, but who you became this year.

We conclude with a prayer that we merit to see the people of Israel continue to grow through challenges, through faith, and through unity.

קומי אורי כי בא אורך וכבוד ה' עליך נגלה

"Arise, shine, for your light has come, and the glory of God shines upon you."

Yom Hazikaron

In commemoration of Yom Hazikaron, we took part in a meaningful soldier memorial event at Binyanei HaUmah. The following morning, we joined thousands of Israelis on Mount Herzl Military Cemetery to mourn the lives of those that were lost defending our country. It was particularly meaningful to be with the families of fallen soldiers and to hear their stories. Several days later, our students returned to Har Herzl Military Cemetery, where they walked through its many sections, spanning from those who fell in the War of Independence to the present day. For those who are Kohanim and could not attend, Ezra Dweck taught a shiur on Hilkhos Kohanim.

Yom Haasmat Graciously sponsored by Bobby & Elaine Dweck

To kick off the Yom Haasmat festivities we went to Merkaz Harav Yeshiva for a special Yom Haasmat Arbit and dancing followed by a Seuda and class by Rabbi Tessler's house! The next morning, we had a special Shahrut followed by a delicious breakfast and uplifting shiur by Rabbi Edward Benjamin. We then headed over to Gan Saker for our legendary Yom Haasmat BBQ!

Nobody does Yom Yerushalayim like Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim! We took part in the flag parade, dancing from the center of Jerusalem to the Kotel where we joined thousands of Jews from all over the country. We then walked back to the Yeshivah for Arbit and a delicious dinner followed by a special class with Rabbi Tessler. He spoke to us about the history of Yerushalayim and what it means to the Jewish people. We want to give a special shoutout to the Hillel Yeshivah senior boys group who joined us for the shiur and we can't wait to officially welcome them next year as students. In the morning, we had a festive Shahrit followed by a special breakfast.

Torat Eres Yisrael

Everyone has a Purpose by Aron Hasbani

Perashat Behalotekha teaches us many lessons, but one specific lesson is that everyone has a role in why Hashem put them here. We see throughout the parasha how jobs and responsibilities were distributed among so many different people, and that shows us one important idea: every person has a specific role in serving Hashem.

In the beginning of the parasha, in the first pesukim, we see that the Kohanim were already appointed to light the Menorah. Later on, they were also appointed to blow the trumpets for all of Bnei Yisrael. Then we see the Levi'im, who were appointed to guard the Mishkan and assist the Kohanim in Abodat Hamishkan. As we continue through the parasha, we see Hashem tell Moshe to gather seventy elders to help lead Bnei Yisrael. The seventy elders were now given their own role in Abodat Hashem, and they also received prophecy from Hashem.

After that, we see Eldad and Medad remain behind in the camp, where they received their own prophecy from Hashem. Even though they were separate from the others, they still had an important purpose and role. So again, why am I mentioning all of these different roles and responsibilities? Because this shows us that everyone has a role and purpose in why they are alive. We see from all of these appointed jobs that every person was chosen for something specific.

It is clear from the parasha that not everyone is meant to do the same thing. Every person serves Hashem in a different way, with different strengths, talents, and responsibilities. Some people lead, some help others, some teach, and some inspire. Yet every role matters. Hashem wakes us up every day so that we can serve Him and live a life of Torah and mitzvot. The different roles in the parasha teach us that every person is unique and special. Everyone has a part in this world and a reason why Hashem put them here.

Aron Hasbani graduated from Hillel Yeshivah High School in 2025 and is currently a student at Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim.

A Transformative Year by David Dweck

There is something in the air in Eres Yisrael that you cannot find anywhere else in the world. I've been here many times before, but nothing compares to actually living here. The moment you step off the plane, you feel it. A warmth, a pull, a sense that this is exactly where you are supposed to be. It's something you can only understand by being here.

The Yeshivah takes us on hikes throughout the year, and walking through this land with my own two feet made me understand something I never could have from just a visit. The land has a heartbeat. You feel it beneath you, around you, in the air you breathe. It's unlike anything I've ever experienced, and I don't think I'll ever stop being grateful for the year that I had.

Some of my favorite memories are the simplest ones. Across the street from us is Gan Saker, a park where we'd play frisbee, go for runs, and just be together. One night after night seder, we brought a speaker to the park and started playing Hebrew music. Everyone was laughing and having a good time, and I thought: I cannot believe this is my life right now. That moment is one I will carry forever.

David Dweck graduated from Yeshivah Prep High School in 2025 and is currently a student at Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim.

Then there was a morning in Rabbi Gold's Gemara class, somewhere around Hanukkah. This year we learned Kiddushin, and I looked over at my friend, and we just smiled at each other. We smiled because we both realized how lucky we are to be learning Torah in Eres Yisrael, from incredible rabbis. I don't think either of us could stop smiling for the rest of the day.

I came here as one person and I'm leaving another. I know that because when I went home for Pesah, I wanted to continue the habits that I built in school. That might sound small, but for me it was everything. This land, this year, these boys changed me. And no matter where I go from here, Eres Yisrael will always feel like home.

Families

As Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim marks its tenth year, "Families" shines a light on parents who have chosen the yeshivah for more than one son. Their experiences capture the consistency, care and confidence that have defined Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim since its founding.

The Tobias Family

Moreshet Magazine (MM): Thanks for taking the time to speak with me today.

Tobias Family (TF): Of course, happy to talk about our experience sending our children to Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim.

MM: Ok. so the first question I have for you is, tell me the names of your children that attended the school and when they went.

TF: Robert Tobias attended the very first year and then our son Morris went four years later.

MM: How did you hear about the school?

TF: Do you know Robert? He's a very laid back kid, never speaks up, always listens to everything I say... He came home one day from school and said, there's this new school opening up and I want to go to. We said you are not going to Israel. There is no way. I made it very clear. And throughout the whole year he just kept going to the meetings. He kept talking about it. He has never in his life been so persistent about something. He kept talking about it and going to the meetings and pushing and pushing it. And I remember one night I knocked on his door. I said, me and dad spoke. We are not sending you to Israel. He didn't answer. I said, okay, it's done. The next day I heard that he signed up, which was very out of his character. And that's when I realized I said, okay, this kid really, really wants this, like really bad.

MM: How did he like the year? Was it a positive experience?

TF: He liked it very, very much. Through the school's internship program he worked for a tech company. It was a half day internship and half day learning so he went from interning to learning, which was a great balance. Then there were nights he got to enjoy. It was the perfect balance of everything, exactly what we wanted him to get from his year.

MM: And then you sent Morris.

TF: So Morris is a little more extroverted than Robert, so I was again hesitant to send in the beginning. I wanted to make sure he was going for the right reasons and not just to have a "year off". But after a few conversations with him we realized that it's the right fit for him.

Families

As Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim marks its tenth year, "Families" shines a light on parents who have chosen the yeshivah for more than one son. Their experiences capture the consistency, care and confidence that have defined Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim since its founding.

I remember him telling us that he really saw the way that Robert came home, a new person, a different person, more focused, knowing what he wants in life. And he said that he wanted that as well so we sent him. And, of course, there was no question that it was Moreshet or nothing. He went and really had the best time. When he went it was actually the COVID year, so it was a very hard year but it was phenomenal. Different ways than Robert's year, but also phenomenal for him.

MM: What do you mean different?

TF: His character, his learning, because it was a very different year. They couldn't go out as much. When they got there, they had to quarantine for 3 weeks. They learned from it. It made them stronger. Just that alone made such a big difference. He became more mature, more independent. Even his relationships with his friends grew and changed. He connected with Rabbi Tessler until today - how many years later? The bond that my son has with the rabbi is something incredible.

MM: Funny, that was actually my next question- was there any specific rabbi that your family got close to?

TF: Rabbi Tessler all the way. We just had him for lunch this past summer. That's like an unbreakable bond. He and my son Morris really love each other and Morris doesn't attach to people easily. He's just a very, very good influence.

MM: How have you seen the school growth from year one, when you sent Robert, to year five when you sent Morris?

TF: First of all, in terms of size, it literally grew in numbers. Robert was one of just a handful of students that first year. I just love watching the school get bigger over the years. Nothing changed in terms of the feel of the place though, because the one-on-one relationships with the rabbis are still there. I think Morris just got the opportunity to meet more people and meet different people from around the world, which was very nice.

MM: Did you see a difference between when your kids went to the school and when they came back?

TF: Absolutely. They came back with much more of a direction of what they wanted in life. They came back much more focused, much more spiritual, they came home with a love of learning. They were much more independent. Exactly what I would have wanted them to get from their year. Also more religious- each of them for what worked for them. After leaving high school, I don't know how much you love that learning and they came home with a new love of learning. So that was very nice to see them keeping that up.

MM: As a parent, what do you love most about the school?

TF: I love the people that are involved. I love the direction that they put our children in for life. They really teach them the code of life. Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim just continues the same goals we have as parents, which is very important to me. No one's redirecting them. No one's giving them extreme ideas or different philosophies. It's the same idea. I like that about the school. We're all on the same page.

MM: For my last question - do you have a message to the Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim team- the rabbis, admin, board and everyone who's involved- on celebrating the ten year anniversary of the school?

TF: Keep up the amazing work, and thank you for shaping our boys and the boys of our community into successful, well adjusted, amazing young men that are going to hopefully be leaders of our community one day. It's definitely due to the magnificent teachings and direction of the school.

Consistency and Time Management: Irwin Sutton by Victor Cohen

Irwin Sutton is someone who uses his time extremely well. He's married, has a full time job, plays sports, and still finds places to fit a sizable amount of Torah into his schedule. He is a master at figuring out how to make the most of a day.

Irwin had the chance to develop this skill throughout his year in Israel, which as he explains at the end, genuinely changed his perspective on time. Below, (largely in his own words!) we will go through why Irwin chose Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim, what he learned, some highlights from his year, and where he is today.

Why Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim:

Irwin explained that there were several factors that influenced his decision to join Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim.

"First, I had never been to Israel before, and I really wanted the opportunity to experience spending a year there," he said.

"Second, I was drawn to the outstanding rabbis and community leaders associated with the yeshiva, whom I hoped to learn from and build relationships with."

"Lastly, I wanted the opportunity to dedicate a full year to personal growth and Torah learning without the usual distractions of everyday life. I believed that this experience would benefit me in the long term, and looking back, that proved to be true."

What He Learned At Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim:

Irwin stayed busy and kept his schedule packed with learning throughout the year, even through any quarantine issues that his year had. "In the mornings," he said, "I learned Masekhet Kiddushin with Rabbi Gold, and in the evenings I learned with Moshe Alouf, who at the time was our madrich. Both of them were incredible teachers and had a major impact on my learning experience."

"During the middle of the day," he said, "I especially enjoyed learning mussar sefarim such as Pirke Abot, as well as studying halacha from Yalkut Yosef. As the year went on, Hersel Chomali and I became Habrutot and learned Masekhet Berakhot together. We finished several perakim together and even continued learning into the summer after returning from Israel."

"I also learned Pirke Abot alongside Victor Terzi at the same pace so that we would be able to make a siyum together. In addition, our night seder group, together with Moshe Alouf, celebrated a siyum on the perek עדים זומינן which was another meaningful highlight of the year."

Highlights Of His Year:

There were many moments and experiences that Irwin could point to as important from his year, ones that stuck with him years after. He chose two.

First was when he injured his knee during the basketball league. "The next morning, Rabbi Tessler went out of his way to take me on many buses and trains to get to the right doctor as quickly as possible."

"What stood out most to me was the genuine care and effort he put in to help anyone in discomfort, and it really inspired me to try to emulate that level of concern for others."

Another major highlight was Yom Haasmat, "when we all went out to Gan Sacher for a big barbecue, played sports, and spent the day together. Seeing the entire park filled with Israeli flags and people celebrating created a really unique and memorable atmosphere that made the day especially meaningful."

Alumni Spotlight

Irwin Sutton Today:

"Right now, my day starts with Rabbi Dana's morning shiur. We recently finished Masekhet Sotah and are currently learning Masekhet Berakhot, which we learn early in the morning around 6:45 in West Deal, followed by tefillah with my father-in-law at 7:30."

After that, he tries to stay consistent with the daily Mishnah and Bitahon WhatsApp chats, which he said helps keep a steady sense of learning throughout the day.

"Most of my daytime is spent at work, but I make a real effort to structure my schedule so that Torah learning is still a consistent part of my routine."

"In the evenings, I have different habrutot throughout the week, which helps me stay connected to learning even with a busy schedule."

To close, here are Irwin's thoughts about how Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim changed his perspective on time.

"The year in Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim really changed my perspective on how time should be used."

"It taught me not to waste time and to prioritize getting up early, learning daily, and starting the day with tefillah and Torah. Beyond the learning itself, I also gained a lot in the area of middot from the rabbis and madrichim who influenced me, especially Ezra Dweck and Moshe Alouf."

"They really emphasized the importance of personal growth and character development, and that this year is meant to be used as a foundation for becoming a better person, not just academically but spiritually and emotionally as well. That mindset pushed me to continue learning mussar sefarim that focus on building character, such as Mesillat Yesharim, Shaar HaBitahon (trust and reliance on Hashem), Pirke Abot, and Iggeret HaRambam, which emphasizes humility and proper conduct. Overall, the experience shaped not just my learning schedule, but the way I view time, growth, and self-improvement in everyday life."

Victor Cohen is a student at Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law and graduated from Baruch College in 2024. He is a graduate of Yeshivat Moreshet Yerushalayim Class of 2022.
